Delegates to Scientific Congress Are Feted at Pan-American Union Building.

BRILLIANT RECEPTION

end brilliance, properly toned by that democracy of the Americas which makes for "peace on earth, good will to men," marked the reception and ball last night in the Hall of the Americas at the Pan-American Union building to the savants who are attending the Pan-American Scientific Congress.

The affair was one of the greatest soelal events in which the people of all countries of the Western Hemisphere ever participated. The Hall of the Americas, the capacious ballroom and auditorium of the Pan-American Union building, began to live up to its name, as it were, shortly after 10 o'clock, when the clan America had assembled in large numbers

There were nearly 4,000 persons in at-tendance during the evening. The building, which has been the scene of many brilliant functions, was in its most gala attire. Special decorations of artistic conception enhanced the simple but wondrously effective beauty of the architecture with its Spanish de-sign and tropical effects. Under the direction of Lieut. William

H. Santelmann, the United States Ma-rine Band blared forth inspiring music throughout the evening, alternating from the striking and louder harmony to dreamy waitz strains for the dancers.

In the Receiving Line.

John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American Union, greeted the guests. Standing in the receiving line were Ambassador and Mme. da Gama, of Brazil; Minister and Mrs. Cespedes, of Cuba, and Minister and Mrs. Zaldivar, of Salvador.

The huge wave of Pan-Americanism that has swept over the Capital has carried on its crest all the Spanish within its influence. In all the departments of the congress are tyros struggling with the intricacles of the language of Castile. The stores, restaurants and places of business throughout the al have also succeeded in getting hold of people who speak something resembling the Spanish language.

Too Polite To Smile.

Every one is trying to express himself in Spanish, if he knows anything of the language; and the Latin-American guest patiently suffers it all, for he is naturally the most polite person in the world. Even when he speaks English fluently, which he generally does, he never bats an eye when some one works off on him Spanish that would make a crocodile shed tears were frequently and when he does not be speaked in the speake of the speaked of the speak And when he does not understand he

The city is full of "translators." Every one who knows a little Spanish thinks he is fitted to be a translator. The Pan-American bureau's call for translators brought this hive of Spanish industry out in a veritable swarm but when the wheat was winnowed from the chaff little remained. And yet this great quantity of applicants for work in Spanish departments, or departments where a knowledge of that language is required, shows the strides Spanish has made of late in the United States.

They encountered unfavorable conditions during part of the period, but later in the year they entered an era of large earnings which, in a number of instances, established new high records for both gross and net earnings. Many weak-lings under cumulative strain got in-to financial trouble. The strong roads at the end of 1915 found themselves again enjoying prosperity.

Forced economies taught the railroads to increase their efficiency, and out of the period of railroad depres-sion there came new records in operating ratios On the other hand, reg-ulative bodies helped in some direc-tions to improve the railroads' posi-tion. Recognition of the fact that a new manner of approach in the mat-ter of regulation and of other rail-road problems was needed, was shown in the suggestion by President Wilson that a commission be named to con-sider the railroad situation as a whole and to make recommendations.

By continuing the economies which had been forced on economies which had been forced on them earlier, the Eastern roads began to show handsome increases in net earnings when the turning point came. Some of the largest roads showed gains in net all the way from 50 per cent to 100 per cent. The New England and Pennsylvania sections gave the earliest signs of revival, and gradually the war order prosperity and other prosperity which came with it and after it spread over the whole section between New York and Chisection between New York and Chicago.

Preliminiary statistics of commercial failures in the United States during 1915 as reported to R. G. Dun & Co., indicate that defaults were much more numerous, but involved fully $55,000,000 less than in the preceding year. Thus the number of suspensions is estimated at 22,052, against 18,280 in 1914, whereas the liabilities were $300,180,894, in comparison with $357.908.859 in the earlier period. The large numerical increase reflects the economic disturbance caused about $8,000,000 over the value of 1510, hitherto the highest ever recorded. Dear Sir-Owing to my sedentary occupation I was rapidly losing weight, and I often heard several of my associates remark that I looked as if I was paying hooky with the graveyard, and I never passed an undertaking establishment without looking the other way. Our family physician suggested horse-back riding and as Washington is noted the world over for its ideal bridal (not matrimony) paths, I scriously considered the proposition.

My first experience with a livery stable, I surely thought would be my last, as a heartless hostler remarked sotto voice, as he was assisting me to mount: "Say, Bill, ain't dia de little mare wot run away wid dat fairy last week?" It is needless to say that silmy equine aspirations immediately vanished, and I was awfully disappointed and discouraged.

But the good doctor accompanied me to Coons' Livery Stable, where I received courteous treatment and was well satisfied with my mount, a beautiful casy-going, brighteyed black little beast, whose rhymic revolutions and graceful poetry of motion, lulied all my fears to rest.

So I am strong for Coons, and cheerfully recommend this livery stable to anybody contemplating horseback riding as a means of exercise. Respectfully yours,

Dear Sir-Not long since I had occasion to require the services of an upholsterer and noted the advertisement of the U.S. Upholstering Company in your valuable paper of which I have been an interested reader for years. The wording of their "Ad." appealed to me and I sent a card asking their representative to call with samples. He did, and I placed an order for the re-upholstering of my three-piece parlor suite.

Their terms were very reasonable and the work was well done and I therefore take pleasure in recommending this firm to all in need of such services. Very truly yours.

"The dawn of a new year has never disclosed more cheerful auguries than those which appear on the herizon of 1915 as the curtains are drawn over the epochal twelve-month that has passed into history. On every hand the wheels of industry and enterprise are moving at a constantly accelerated pace under the vitalizing influence of trade's quickening pulse; the vaults of our banks are overflowing with surplus cash, so that ne legitlmate demand for credit need go unheeded; our farms have produced the most abundant crops in their history the whole world is seeking the output of our mines, which, despite their unprecedented production, are unable to supply the expanding need for raw and fabricated material, and to us alone of all the great powers have been vouchsafed the blessings of peace and political tranguility. We are originators—not imitators—in making over old hats.

Dear Sir-I am pleased to say that I patronize Cokinos Bros., 924 9th st. N. W., because they sell fresh and wholesome candicast reasonable prices. An error was made some time ago by delivering a different kind from that purchased to my residence. Their attention was called to the matter several days later, and they were so exceedingly courteous in rectifying same and exhibited such a keen desire to please that I rather regretted calling their attention to it. They certainly are a fair-dealing firm.
